About Author DJ Geribo

Author DJ Geribo completed her first novel, a pre-teen chapter book "The House at the Top of the Trees", in 2014. She's published a book almost every year since, starting with a couple of children's books that combined her love of painting in 'Eddie Easel and the Case of the Missing Green' and 'Mouse Bound.' A non-fiction title about her dog that contracted IMHA, 'The Miracle Dog' followed. Next to be published was a collection of literary short stories in 'Seven Storied Houses' and a collection of memories compiled from childhood titled 'Me and Them'. 'The Mart' and 'Deep Lake House' are her latest novels. And, due out summer of 2025 are 'Useful Pieces' and 'Ten Storied Buildings'.

DJ's favorite subjects to write about include women trying to survive in a man's world and exploring the hardships endured by people who weren't born into privileged lives. Her characters are often just trying to survive, doing the best they can with their limited knowledge, prospects, and resources. She refers to her writing style by her tagline: "Writing Gets Real".

When the author's not writing, she also enjoys reading, of course, painting, and exercise in many forms from lifting weights, e-bike riding, golfing in the summer with her husband, snowshoeing in the winter months, and walking any time of year, and just hanging out with her Pomeranian and her Cockatoo. Twenty-seven rural acres in New Hampshire is another source of enjoyment and exercise as she and her husband work to maintain their land, keeping as natural an environment as possible to attract and provide habitat for the various birds and wildlife in their area.

DJ's books can be purchased directly from her website at www.DJGeribo.com and her publisher at www.BBDPublishing.com. Selected titles are also available from Amazon in both e-book and print formats. To learn about her latest books, visit the author's website. DJ also maintains two other websites that feature more of her writing: www.ALittleLiterature.com and www.StoryinSix.com.